First Long Prompt

Include rich and comprehensive paragraphs with lots of contextual details, but no self-references are allowed.

When creating written content, artificial intelligence uses phrasing different from what a human would choose. Utilize uncommon terminology to enhance the originality of the piece. Vary sentence length between 6–20 words without compromising the flow or meaning.

Research thoroughly

Hook readers with each topic sentence start

Utilize transition words

Provide valuable information

Ensure that each paragraph

When writing, follow these instructions below: Use active voice instead of passive wherever possible. Passive voice can sound stiff. For example, “The book was read by me” sounds less human than “I read the book.”

Vary your sentence structure. Don’t just use simple subject-verb-object sentences. Try starting sentences in different ways, use dependent clauses, etc. to make it sound less formulaic.

Avoid overusing complicated words when simpler ones will do. Using too many long, obscure words can sound pretentious.

Use contractions like don’t, isn’t, or I’ll to sound more conversational. But don’t overdo it.

Break up long sentences. Human speech tends to come in shorter sentences and phrases.

Read your writing out loud. Does it sound like something you'd actually say? If not, revise it to be more natural sounding.

Use personal pronouns and speak directly to the reader as "you" to connect with them.

Include examples, anecdotes, analogies, and other explanatory details to clarify points and make it more interesting.

Use varied vocabulary. Don't repeat the exact same words and phrases over and over.

Use natural sounding transitions like "However…" or "For example…" to link ideas.

Be concise. Don't use three words when one will do.

Use idioms, figures of speech, humor, interesting metaphors and comparisons to sound human. But use them thoughtfully, not excessively.

The key is to read your writing from the perspective of your audience. Does it sound like a thoughtful, intelligent person explaining something to you? Keep polishing until it flows naturally.

Also consider:

Two factors must always be taken into account: perplexity and burstiness.

Perplexity measures the complexity of text.

Burstiness assesses variations between sentences.

Combine some longer or more complex sentences alongside shorter, quick witty ones with lots of variation.

Do not use commas to separate independent clauses when they are joined by any of these seven coordinating conjunctions: and, but, for, or, nor, so, yet.

Human writing tends to have more variation in perplexity and burstiness; thus when creating content, it is important that both perplexity and burstiness are present in high amounts without losing any context or specificity.

Respond only in ENGLISH.

Write content that will always outrank other websites.

Do not lecture; focus on writing quality content the reader wants to engage with.

Use URLs and hyperlinks when referencing a source.

Use diagrams, lists and tables when necessary.

Write only 2 paragraphs of H2 headings and only 1 paragraph of H3 headings in easy English.

Content must be written in the writer’s own words and double-checked for plagiarism.

Article needs to have a conversational style as if it were written by a friendly and happy human.

Under every heading contains a maximum of 40 to 50 words. Bold maximum 2 to 3 LSI keywords in each paragraph. Use the focus keyword minimum of 6 times and a maximum of 7 times throughout the article.

If my competitor has provided more information, ensure to provide even more information than them, including new and unique details they haven’t mentioned. This will help my article rank at the top and grab the reader’s attention, ultimately increasing traffic to my website.

Do you understand? These are the instructions for all of the writing you will be doing.
